COURAGEOUS

Your Courageous Response

Dear friends,

How can I describe 2020?

For the first time in my life, I am confined to a very small circle: my family (some of them); my work (at home and in Zoom meetings); my friends (whatever way we can safely keep in touch).

BUT God has done tremendous things in the past 12 months.

First of all, by His strength, Christians have risen to the task. You don't hear about them on the news or see them in social media. But thousands of men and women have courageously looked beyond themselves to reach out to families in crisis.

Secondly, courageous local leaders have made difficult decisions within their communities. We are so excited to hear the stories of churches empowering families, especially in some of the poorest communities. Communities, strengthened by God's grace, are changing their future.

Finally, people have turned to God, relying on His wisdom.

As you read through the following pages you will see the impact of your prayers and financial support. God is at work!

I invite you to continue to support the Tearfund movement to end extreme poverty. In the light of the challenges of the global pandemic, join us as we pray for wisdom. We already see indications of deepening poverty. It will take courage to respond.

Over the past 12 months you've funded COVID-19 prevention and relief projects in 11 countries.

You can be an integral part of that movement of courage. Together, with Christ-led congregations, we walk alongside families, helping them break through the barriers of poverty. Through new storage techniques generating more income, and women joining savings groups to build for the future, families are traveling a new path: one of sustainability and not of dependency.

God, working in His time, uses ordinary people like you and me to impact significant change. We can't do it without you.

We, God's people, are at the very centre of change. Our prayer is that the broken relationships with God, with one another and with creation will be restored.

By God's grace may we act in courage.

COVID-19 Update

In the past 2 decades we have seen a tremendous reduction in poverty. Yet in just 12 months, as COVID infiltrated every community, that has reversed. At first, we hoped for a quick end to the pandemic with only short-term economic repercussions. But in reality it is clear that 2021 will be a very difficult year.

Trusting God for the funds, you have helped us invest $1.8 million in COVID-relief programs. We are now helping families bridge the gap in all countries we work in, with a special emphasis on South Sudan, the DRC, Ethiopia, and Colombia. In the name of Jesus, we will go forward in prayer, courage and compassion, coming alongside our brothers and sisters living in extreme poverty.

In Colombia, refugee families are receiving food package weekly from local churches.

Church-based Community Transformation

Healing the Hidden Scars of Sexual Violence

Through Tearfund, you're equipping pastors and local church leaders to transform their communities in some of the poorest places on earth. One of those places is in South Sudan, a country ravished by decades of war, famine, and economic turmoil. Last year, donors like you equipped churches in South Sudan to respond to the thousands of women and girls who have been sexually abused.

Over 65% of women and girls in South Sudan experience sexual and gender based violence

350 pastors and 750 church leaders have been trained in Biblically based Trauma Care.

45,000 people tuned into sexual violence awareness radio broadcasts

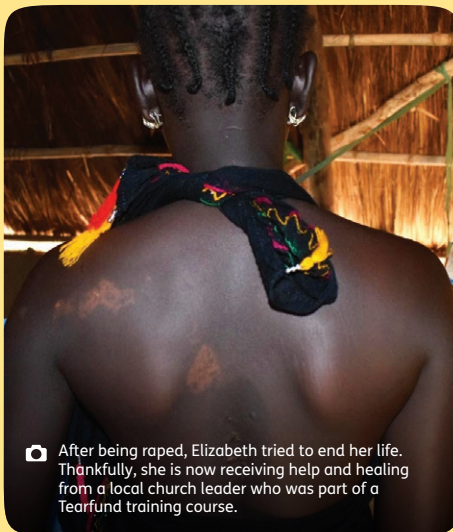

Light in Darkness:

Helping churches tackle sexual violence in South Sudan

Not far from her home, Elizabeth was raped and impregnated by a young man who wanted her as his wife. Barely a month later, she was brutally beaten by the man's brother. Elizabeth didn't want to be a part of such a violent family. She felt so hopeless that she tried to end her life.

She failed, but her family was devastated. They didn't know what to do.

The tragic reality is that South Sudan has one of the highest rates of sexual violence in the world – which is often used as a weapon of war. Directly opposite to God's good plan, this has many serious short- and long-term consequences on a woman's physical, mental, and spiritual health.

After being raped, Elizabeth tried to end her life. Thankfully, she is now receiving help and healing from a local church leader who was part of a Tearfund training course.

Thankfully not long after Elizabeth's tragic event, a female church leader named Nyamlel heard about Elizabeth's story and was determined to help. She was one of the 1,100 pastors and leaders that were trained in Tearfund's biblically-based trauma recovery and healing curriculum in the past 2 years. Thanks to your support, Nyamlel was able to come alongside Elizabeth and her family and help them find some light in the midst of darkness. While the family is pursuing justice, they are also learning to forgive the men who attacked Elizabeth as a result of Nyamlel's counselling.

The COVID-19 pandemic has brought many challenges to our church partners, but that didn't stop them courageously entering into the mission God has given them. Our local partner, CEDS, organized six learning sessions at a local radio station focusing on sexual violence, trauma and the role of the church. Over 45,000 people in the area tuned into the broadcasts! Despite the pandemic in South Sudan, we've seen leaders in 10 more churches become trained in Biblically-based trauma care.

Supporters like you are changing the story for women and girls like Elizabeth. Churches are showing the love of Christ to their sisters who are healing from physical and emotional pain. They are reaching out to their Muslim neighbours bringing hope. In 2021, will continue to bring hope and healing to even more women through the persistent power of the local church.

Conservation Agriculture

Helping Thousands of Families Overcome Hunger

How would your life change if your income doubled? Or even tripled? It seems impossible, but it has become a reality for thousands of farming families throughout East Africa.

In 2016, donors like you helped start the Scaling Up Conservation Agriculture (SUCA) program. In partnership with the Canadian Foodgrains bank, we had a massive vision – to train 10,850 farmers how to grow more food and help them climb out of poverty for good.

With our local partners, we focused on two countries, Ethiopia and Tanzania – where lack of food and extreme poverty is widespread. Families in these countries rely on small farms for food and income, but it is rarely enough. For months, families often only eat one meal per day, and some skip days altogether. This chronic hunger leads to malnourished children, violence, and indebtedness. Beyond the dinner table, this extreme poverty affects the spirit as well. It lies to individuals and tells them that they don't matter, and that there is no hope – perpetuating the cycle of poverty for generations.

This is not God's heart. Through your generous donations, over the last 5 years we were able to train over 14,000 farmers in new farming practices. Helping them increase their crop yields by an average of 216%! With the added crops, families have enough to eat and more income. Many have been able to send their kids to school for the first time. Hope abounds. Often run with local churches, families not only know how to grow more food, but that they are made in the image of God and are valued by him.

Good news spreads! One of the most exciting parts of this program was the abundance of “copy-cat” farmers. For every farmer we train, they train many more! The results have been so successful that even national governments are noticing the transformation taking place. Just recently, the Ethiopian government has made conservation agriculture an official method of farming nationwide.

Thank you so much for your generosity! You have been instrumental in transforming thousands of lives. As we look to renew the project, our goal is that even more farmers will be trained so they can lift themselves out of poverty. This Year we're expanding this successful intervention into new regions.

Breaking Away From Handouts

Like many farmers in East Africa, Mesele Madebo struggled to grow enough to feed his family. But after he adopted farming practices he learned from one of our local church partners, his life was transformed. He was so excited that he wanted to tell all his neighbours! So he volunteered to be a “local animator.”

Animators are a group of local farmers who train other farmers in conservation agriculture. As a local animator, Mesele has taught over 122 other farmers in his community how to grow more food as well. His success lies with partnering with local churches, who often allow Mesele to set up a small model farm plot on their property. “I teach in local churches after the Sunday worship program,” says Mesele. “Now when people come to church, not only do their spiritual bellies get full, their physical bellies do too.”

📷 Mesele, a local farmer, training other farmers in his village about conservation agriculture.

The impact goes beyond the official training. Many farmers, after seeing the change in their neighbour’s crops, become curious and ask them how it happened. That is exactly what happened in Esaya Kenfero’s case. He saw that his neighbour’s crops were thriving while his were dying and asked his neighbour why. His neighbour told him about conservation agriculture and he decided to try it out for himself. Esaya is what we call a “spontaneous adopter.” Now his crops are thriving too.

We believe that all people have been equipped with God-given abilities. When unlocked, there is no end to the transformation possible.

“When we set out to start the SUCA project 5 years ago we had no idea it would have the impact that it did. We are completely blown away by the results. Praise the Lord. In some areas, farmers are growing 5 times as much! It has really transformed the lives of families.”

Notes

IMPROVED ACCESS TO FOOD

Approximately 97,040 people (farmers and their households) now have food to eat for 11 to 12 months with 99% in Ethiopia and 75% in Tanzania reporting that they are food secure. Additionally, families say that the variety of food they eat is now diverse. In Ethiopia, families report that they only spend 20% of their income on food, much lower than the threshold of 50%.

INCREASED SAVINGS AND REVENUE GENERATION

96% of households in Ethiopia and 99.1% in Tanzania have reported that they have not had to use coping strategies because of insufficient food. Moreover, 100% of farmers in Ethiopia and 99.6% in Tanzania had enough income to pay for necessary expenses such as school fees, health care, loan debt, and farming tools. In Ethiopia, a total of 5,034 families (80% female) are now participating regularly in self-help savings groups (goal was 2,000).

INCREASED EQUALITY BETWEEN MALE AND FEMALE FARMERS

Over 75% of female farmers in Ethiopia report having a diverse, healthy diets compared to 23.5% before the project. In Tanzania, 4,299 farmers have received training on gender equality related to farming and housework. In Tanzania, 45% of participants in farmer co-ops are female.

SUSTAINABILITY AND REPLICATION

There is a strong movement of farmers spontaneously adopting (copy farmers) new conservation agriculture techniques in both countries. Moreover, we're thrilled to announce that the Ethiopian government has made conservation agriculture an official method of farming country wide.

‘What’s amazing is that for every farmer we trained, they went out and trained their neighbours. The impact of this project exceeded our expectations. God has blessed abundantly.’

PICS Bags:

Overcoming One Mother's Dilemma

Asnakech Gaushe had a dilemma. Using conservation agriculture practices, she was now able to grow more than enough food for herself and 7 children – 1,200kg of maize, 60kg of lablab (a type of bean), and over 200 heads of pumpkin! It was more food than they have ever seen in their entire lives! Initially, Asnakech had great joy! It flowed out of her. But joy soon turned to concern.

It would be impossible for her family to eat all of this before the crops went rotten. She could sell the crops, but since it was harvest, everyone in the village was doing the same – dropping prices to rock bottom. She knew if she sold now, they wouldn't have enough money to last until next year's harvest.

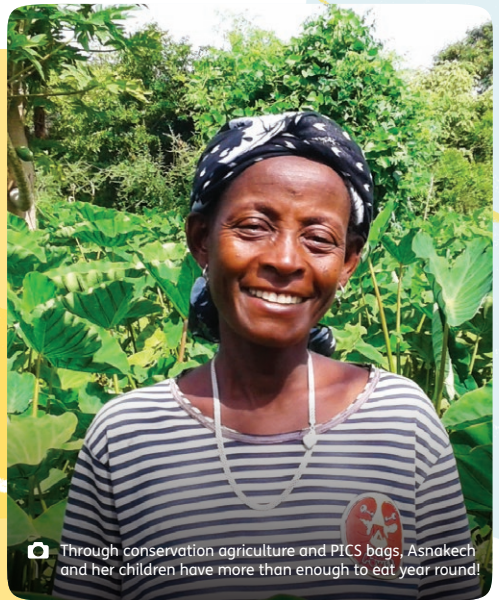

Just that week, Asnakech attended her savings group called "Lemlem" like she did every week. Through the group she saved 20 cents per week and even was able to take out a loan from the group to expand her land. But this week was different.

A trainer was there from Tearfund's local church partner and he was holding up a huge 3-layer plastic and woven PICS bag. "This," he said, "will help preserve your crops for months and protect it from mold and pests." What did she have to lose? Asnakech decided to try them out. She acquired a few of the bags to store her Maize and Pigeon Peas. A few months later she was blown back by the results!

PICS Bags are an innovative new technology that protects crops from pests, mold, and spoilage. With your help, Tearfund introduced 25,000 of these bags to thousands of farmers in Ethiopia. Through them Asnakech was able to preserve 200kg of maize and 150kg of Pigeon peas and sell them for much more than before.

"The PICS Bags are a game changer!" she told us. "My family now has food year round, and they have given us an income during the lean months."

Because of generous supporters like you, Asnakech and her family no longer go hungry and are climbing out of extreme poverty.

Through conservation agriculture and PICS bags, Asnakech and her children have more than enough to eat year round!

PICS Bags are so simple and cheap, yet they're transforming lives throughout East Africa.

The Spark of Innovation

We all have the God-given potential to do amazing things. Through your support of savings groups and market training, you're helping unlock this potential so that people can escape poverty using their own skills and abilities.

In 2020, your donations helped create approximately 256 new savings groups helping 5,895 people save for new businesses, education, and emergencies. But that's not all.

Starting in December 2019, donors like you helped farmers dramatically increase their revenue by training them in simple marketing concepts such as supply and demand, market cycles, and market aggregation (selling crops in bulk). Using PICS bags, farmers were able to prevent their crops from spoiling and sell them months after harvest when prices rose. Moreover, by forming farmer co-ops and selling crops in bulk, these smallholder farmers were even able to attract big buyers from the city!

Instead of selling 1kg of pigeon peas for 19 cents, farmers were able to sell it at 88 cents – over 4x more! The success of the training has attracted the attention of savings groups in the area. The initial pilot project aimed at training 1,000 farmers, but this number grew to an incredible 5,959 due to word-of-mouth.

Throughout the course of the project, the local church was at the centre - supporting communities as they adopted this new technology and began collaborating in co-ops. Churches in the region play a significant role in releasing people from poverty, and many of the local groups and training happens within church walls.

Through Tearfund, you're part of a global community focused on facing the challenges of poverty and injustice through God's love. We don't believe that we're called to tackle this massive challenge on our own. Instead, we believe that God loves partnerships and that together, God's people can be an incredible hub of change!

When you give to Tearfund, you're coming alongside local churches around the world to transform their communities. You're also partnering with likeminded Christian organizations who also desire to put an end to poverty and unlock people's God-given potential. Through these partnerships, we are able to transform more lives, in more places, at a fraction of the cost. We are lean – only 12 Canadian staff, supporting and training over 500 nationals in 11 countries who are changing the world one family at a time.
